PREFACE

This handbook is designed as a supplement to various other University publications, in particular the NMSU Policy Manual and Student Handbook, which are the official legal resources for University policies and procedures. All English students are urged to take the necessary time to read these materials. It is the responsibility of each student to familiarize himself or herself with this information and to seek clarification as needed.

The NMSU Policy Manual, Academic Catalogs, and Student Handbook can be found through the Office of the General Counsel as well as online at:

WELCOME

Congratulations on your acceptance to the New Mexico State University English Department Graduate Program! On behalf of the students, administrators, graduate faculty and staff, we welcome you.

Each year, we seek to admit an outstanding group of applicants to join our collegial community of students, faculty, and staff. We are extremely proud of this community, as all within it are committed to expanding the boundaries of human knowledge and understanding. Between admission and graduation comes what many consider to be some of the most fulfilling years of their professional lives. These years are spent within a flourishing academic environment containing peers and mentors that will challenge you to reach beyond your perceived limits of ability and creativity. Just as the community shapes you, you will help to shape the community as you form and test ideas, hone your area of expertise, and aid your peers in doing the same.

We choose our students with great care precisely because we are so invested in your development and we know the important and unique contributions to knowledge and society that you will offer. We wish you a successful and enjoyable chapter of your life as you begin your graduate studies at New Mexico State University.

ARRIVING ON CAMPUS

When you arrive on campus there are a few things that need to be done right away.

• You will need to set up your MyNMSU account. The MyNMSU portal is a secure site that provides NMSU students, faculty, and staff with services to manage their affairs. It facilitates access to registration, grades, Banner Self-Service, and your NMSU email account.

To set up your MyNMSU account, use the following steps:

- 1. Go to http://accounts.nmsu.edu/accounts/activation/
- 2. Enter your Social Security number and date of birth.
- 3. Click Submit.
- 4. Click the Accept button.
- 5. Choose a user name and enter it.
- 6. Click Continue.
- 7. Enter the information for a Secret Question.
- 8. Enter the answer to the Secret Question and confirm your answer by retyping it in the next field.
- 9. Click Continue.
- 10. Enter your six digit PIN number and confirm it by retyping the same number in the next field
- 11. Click Submit.
- 12. Click Activate MyNMSU Account button to complete the process.

STUDENT ID

- All regularly enrolled students and full-time Faculty/Staff are required to have an Aggie ID Card. Students must present a valid ID card to University units and/or personnel to verify eligibility to access campus facilities, services, and privileges. Your ID card can be used for printing services, Aggie Cash accounts, Meal Plans, as a library card, and residence hall access cards.
- To get your ID card, go to ID Card Services. Bring a photo ID with you.
- ID Card Services is open Monday-Friday: 8 a.m.-4:30pm.
- They can also be reached by calling (575) 646-4835

MAILBOXES

• All Graduate Students will be given a mailbox in the English Department Office.

CUBICLES

• Cubicles will only be given to Graduate Assistants and will be located in Milton Hall. You will be given two keys, one for the building and one for your cubicle.

REGISTRATION

All GAs are required to take nine credit hours. Students must be registered for nine hours at the point we submit the hires. Human Resources will not allow us to process a hire if that student is not registered for 9 hours. We have included registration information below.

- When a student applies for one of the programs in the English Department they are given a Banner Number. The number either begins with 800... or 8000... (It will be a 9-digit number). If you were an undergraduate at New Mexico State University you will use the Banner number that was assigned to you at that time. You will not need a new Banner number.
- If you are an incoming graduate student a Banner number has been assigned to you. Please call Cathy Robinson at Graduate Student Services (575-646-2152) for information about how to access your ID number.
- Prior to registering, please contact your academic advisor. He or she can advise you on which classes to take. The name of your academic advisor is listed in the Letter that was mailed to you offering you the GA position. You may also call the Graduate Secretary (Lydia Apodaca at 575-646-6170 or email lapodaca@nmsu.edu) to find out your assigned advisor. If you need to change advisors in the future, please consult the Graduate Secretary to complete the required form.
- To register for classes, you will go through the MyNMSU system.
 - To register go to MyNMSU: www.my.nmsu.edu.
 - Before you can register, you will need to activate your account.
 - After you have created a new account you can access the class schedule. Check on the classes that you want to register for. Make sure you write down the CRN numbers for registration.
 - Click on Registration
 - Next click on Add or Drop a class. Where it says CRN, you will put the number assigned to the course. This will add the class for you.
 - If you have a class that needs Instructor Signature, email the instructor. Ask the instructor for an "override." Make sure to give the instructor your Banner ID. Once the instructor has processed an electronic override, you may register for the course. You can find instructor contact information in the Department Directory at the back of this handbook.
 - You can print out your Registration Document from the MyNMSU website under "Student Detail Schedule".

NEH Postgraduate Seminars in Linguistics and Rhetoric, Rutgers University & University of Nevada

MA in English, 1974, University of Rhode Island

BA in English with Honors in American Studies, 1972, Rutgers College

Program: Rhetoric and Professional Communication

Biography: I joined the English faculty in 1981 as Composition Coordinator after spending 6 years teaching writing & literature, and developing writing programs at Stockton State College in New Jersey. I have served as Department Head and Writing Program Director. My specialties include writing and the teaching of writing, writing across the curriculum, rhetoric, and assessment. I have conducted Writing Across the Curriculum Seminars since 1981. As the Executive Director of the Borderlands Writing Project, I work to provide professional development for teachers from kindergarten through university levels. NMSU has allowed me to cultivate my interests in rhetoric, public discourse, and pedagogical theory. My primary pedagogical and scholarly objective is encouraging the ethical and civic development of students and assisting teachers in this same work.

LAURIE CHURCHILL College Professor Internship Coordinator

Email: ljchurch@nmsu.edu

Phone: 1-(575)-646-4015

Office: Clara Belle Williams Hall Room 111

Education: Ph.D. in Literature (Latin & English), 1985, University of California at Santa Cruz

MAT in Latin and Classics, 1972, University of Massachusetts at Amherst

BA in Classical Civilizations & Latin, 1970, Boston University

Program: Latin, Literature, Rhetoric and Professional Communication

Biography: I arrived in New Mexico in 2000, seeking sunlight and a drier climate than central Ohio. For my first nine or so years at NMSU, I was involved in a variety of programs through the Graduate School, the Office of the Vice President for Research, the Provost's Office and the College of Education. I began teaching for the English Department in Fall 2010 and am greatly enjoying being back in the classroom after a long hiatus. I teach a range of courses from Comparative and Classical Mythology, to Perspectives on Literature and a graduate-level course on professional writing and technical communication. I also oversee the internship program for the English Department and in conjunction with that ENGL 4/597, the internship support course. I also teach elementary and intermediate Latin through the Languages and Linguistics Department. 9

ROSE CONLEY College Instructor

Email: roconley@nmsu.edu

Phone: 1-(575)-646-5843

Office: Clara Belle Williams Hall Room 217

Education: MA, 2005

BA in English, 2003, New Mexico State University

Program: Literature

Biography: The courses I normally teach include Women Writers, Children's and Young Adult Literature, Writing in the Humanities and Social Sciences (subtitled Women across Media), Principles of Literature, Principles of Film, and Business and Professional Communication. My teaching and scholarly interests are in modern literature, cultural and film studies, and feminist theory. My course designs typically emphasize diversity in cultural, historical, ethnic, racial, and international contexts, as well as diversity among writers' backgrounds, subject matters, and writing styles. Pedagogically, I work to achieve a balance of 40% lecture and 60% student led discussions. To that end, students are assigned in class free-writes and small group work exercises, both of which help facilitate class discussion, strengthen students' participation grades, and help students in successfully completing essay assignments. Providing as much detailed feedback as possible on students' papers has been a consistently effective means of strengthening students' writing and critical thinking skills. Course content and pedagogical methods are continuously adjusted based on students' responses in their evaluations.

RYAN CULL Associate Professor

Email: ryancull@nmsu.edu

Phone: 1-(575)-646-2600

Office: Clara Belle Williams Hall Room 220

Education: Ph.D., 2007, University of Illinois

MA in English, 2000, University of Alabama Tuscaloosa

BA in English, 1997, University of Alabama Tuscaloosa

Program: Literature

Biography: Though I teach a broad range of courses, my focus is on American poetry from the late nineteenth century to the present. I have published essays on writers including Whitman, Dickinson, Marianne Moore, William James, and Richard Rorty. In all my classes my hope is to establish a mutual trust between teachers and student. This trust is built by communicating, whether in leading discussions or commenting on papers. I am eager to continue to learn alongside students who are approaching these texts for the first time. After all, if I want students to risk rethinking their preconceptions, then so should I. This makes it possible to establish lines of inquiry that encourage students not only to appreciate the art of literature but to feel comfortable enough to explore how they are implicated by its history and discursive practices. And it is this difficult reflection about self and culture that generates both great research in the classroom and an enriching sense of literature's relevance in the wider world.

JOYCE GARAY Associate Professor

Email: jgaray@nmsu.edu

Phone: 1-(575)-646-2317

Office: Clara Belle Williams Hall Room 225

Education: Ph.D. in English, 1999, Stanford University

BA in English, 1988, University of California-Los Angeles

Program: Literature

Biography: I joined the faculty in 2000 as an Assistant Professor of Twentieth-Century British and Post-colonial Literature. As a teacher I am primarily to be a resource for students working to know the material and develop their skills. As someone who has always found studying hard, I hope to work with students in demystifying material and tasks that are often coded as difficult or even inaccessible, such as modern literary and cinematic texts, theory, or writing. In my research I try to combine socio-historical and formal methods to texts and films, which I view as human cultural products-made thingsdistinct from but related to the ideas we may have about them. I tend to focus on changes in how, during the period from 1900 until now, people struggle to record or represent what evades direct perception or understanding: the past, global social processes, technology, or even much of what is happening in our own bodies. My current project is a study of the films of David Lynch.

Biography: Two of my deeply held beliefs about learning are that 1) learning is a social process which becomes very personal through the relationships of learners to teachers, and 2) the way in which students are addressed affects not only their responses to teachers but also the learning opportunities they see or do not see for themselves (Ellsworth). With this in mind, I work to connect with the identities and interests students bring to school, particularly as they intersect with learning and acquiring multiple literacies. My role as a teacher is to address students in ways that support their connection to the university and to their learning. In constructing strong relationships with students, I hope to create opportunities for them to learn multiple ways of communicating both inside and outside of school. In addition, my research is often related to my overarching interest in how individuals and groups approach literacy, learning, and issues of identity.

Program: Poetry

Biography: I grew up in a Maine border town with few creative outlets, so I moved to New York City once I graduated. I began studying writing with poets Nicholas Christopher and Philip Schultz at The New School, the Poetry Society of America and Writers Studio. New York launched me on a wonderful apprenticeship as a poet as I worked flexible jobs. Besides attending as many poetry readings as I could, I developed into an avid dance and music performance attendee, became interested in visual arts, often going to five or six events a week. Overall, my immersion in the avant-garde art world of the 1980's allowed me to understand the benefits of a vibrant art community and the role of an artist within one.

My book, Cathedral of the North, won the AWP Award in Poetry and was released by University of Pittsburgh Press. Rare High Meadows of Which I Might Dream was published by University of Chicago Press and was a finalist for the Los Angeles Times Book Award.

Biography: Patti Wojahn is an Associate Professor in the English Department's Rhetoric and Professional Communication Program. At New Mexico State University since 1999, she began serving in the dual roles of Associate Department Head and Writing Programs Director in 2007. Her research has focused primarily on writing across the curriculum efforts, technologies for communicating and collaborating, and interdisciplinary approaches to problems. She has lately been concerned with writing program development and assessment issues, and she recently took on the role of Borderlands Writing Project Director. She thoroughly enjoys the sunshine that can be found most every day in New Mexico; her favorite activities there include hiking with her dog in the mountains and taking pictures of local culture.

THE WRITING CENTER

The Writing Center offers free one-on-one tutoring for all NMSU students. We work with undergraduate and graduate writers at any level of experience and can help with anything from understanding assignment directions to revising final drafts. Our Center is staffed by graduate assistants who teach undergraduate writing courses through the English Department. The NMSU writing center staff possess different writing, teaching, and scholarly backgrounds. While our consultants have diverse writing and academic backgrounds, the consultants you work with may not have familiarity in your specific discipline. Your advisor may be the most important person with whom to speak about writing conventions in your discipline. However, we can provide you with a different perspective on your writing, and we look forward to working with you on your writing and helping you develop as a writer.

The NMSU Writing Center values the work of student writers. We strive to help students become more knowledgeable, practiced, and confident writers through collaborative, dialogue-centered consultations. We also value the opportunity to learn from our experiences working with students in order to become better writers, tutors, and teachers.

The Writing Center opens the second full week of classes during the regular semester. We are open through the last week of classes and closed during exam week. We are also closed for any campus holidays. In the summer, we are open when summer courses are in session.

Doing a little preparation for your consultation can ensure your time is spent efficiently. Here are some suggestions we think will make your consultation more effective:

- Register for your appointment by visiting our online consultation schedule and make sure to include a little information about the assignment you're working on and the issues you'd like to address in your consultation. Make sure to schedule your consultation far enough in advance so you can revise based on your discussion with the consultant.
- When you arrive at the writing center, make sure you have a print or electronic copy of your paper (an outline, a pre-write, a full draft is fine or even just a few ideas about the assignment or project can also help), a prompt for the assignment, and anything you feel might be relevant or helpful to the consultant. These materials can help the consultant better assist you and focus your time on the issues that matter to you and your writing.
- You have one hour for your consultation, so if you bring longer works such as seminar papers, conference presentations, or dissertation or thesis sections, you and the consultant will not likely address every issue in that document. However, your consultant can help you learn how to edit your document and find issues on your own that you can address and bring back to the writing center if you wish.

THE DESIGN CENTER

The overarching goal of the Design Center is to offer multimedia technologies, development resources and instructional support for English Department graduate students interested in creating multimodal texts for varied audiences. Through coursework and student-run consultancy projects, it immerses learners in authentic communicative, expressive, and creative activities by providing an environment that combines direct instruction and theoretical inquiry with practice-based approaches. It affords opportunities for production and research collaboration across disciplinary, university, community, and industry boundaries. Through this outreach, students work on projects that provide situations for learning to respond in creative and rhetorically sophisticated ways to the dynamic needs and interests of variable contexts and audiences.

Though limited in the number of students it can serve at one time, the Design Center is particularly well equipped to support graduate courses in publication management, document design, multimedia production and editing, digital video composing, interactive multimedia development, and web-based communication. It also has potential for courses in literacy and rhetoric through incorporating digital media as a means of conducting research (e.g., qualitative, community-based inquiry, work on the usability of texts, etc.). Additionally, the Center provides a space for courses in creative writing and literature that integrate digital text production and analysis. And finally, the Center may be used by English Department faculty for courses tied to the Creative Media Institute and relating directly to the production of digital media for communicative purposes.

What's Available?

The Design Center uses Power Macs and iMacs to run a number of applications for graphic design, page layout, web/HTML editing, web animation and interactive multimedia, video editing, and audio editing. A scanner, inkjet, and laser printing are also available. For more information on available software and hardware, please visit the website.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT INTERNSHIPS

MA, MFA, and PhD graduate students in any English Department field—rhetoric and professional communication, creative writing, or literature—are encouraged to pursue an internship.

The NMSU English Department offers an internship program to its graduate and advance undergraduate students who seek hands-on experience preparing for careers involving webpage and document design and development, grant-proposal writing, technical writing, marketing, and related skills. Internships help students hone and enhance their workplace skills on-site and under the direction of a supervisor. Typically interns enroll in ENGL 497/597. This is a 3-credit hour online course aimed at deepening the on-site experience. A 3-credit internship requires 8-10 hours of work per week onsite during a semester or 10-12 hours per week during summer session. A maximum of 6 credits may be earned through internships. The English Department Internship Coordinator oversees the online course and will assist students in identifying an internship placement suited to their skills and career goals.

Interested students must apply for a specific internship position (announced on department or university listserves and via the 497/597 website) and be selected by the site supervisor. Students may meet with Dr. Laurie Churchill, Internship Coordinator, in order to determine site placement and availability. Students should be prepared with a current CV or resume, and have appropriate academic/professional skills that meet the needs of the prospective site placement organization. It is also possible to create an internship position through existing contacts or organizations with which the student has been previously affiliated.

DIN MAGAZINE & PUERTO DEL SOL JOURNAL

DIN Magazine is an artistic vector; a multimodal literary magazine of the digital age that allows the intersection of traditional literature with innovative composition. We seek creative artists of all types and backgrounds to contribute to our vision of modern aesthetic magnitude.

Undergraduate and graduate students at New Mexico State University proudly bring the fourth edition to you. We hope to build a community of new artists whose work is undiscovered to help them start their journeys as writers, artists, photographers, and musicians.

http://dinmagazine.nmsu.edu

Puerto del Sol, now in its 47th year of publication, is the journal of the English Department at New Mexico State University dedicated to providing a forum for innovative poetry, prose, drama, criticism and artwork from emerging and established writers and artists.

ENGLISH GRADUATE STUDENT ORGANIZATION

The English Graduate Student Organization supports the English graduate student body at NMSU. We hope to encourage a sense of community among graduate students in the department while facilitating academic service and professional development. The English Graduate Student Organization:

-focuses on providing information and assistance regarding national and international conference attendance (reimbursements, requirements, processes, etc.), and creating and nurturing a sense of academic, social, and departmental community.

-meets 3 times in the Fall (September, October, November)

-requires a minimum of 6 community service hours (per and throughout, each semester; on and/or off campus; fulfills an ASNMSU Senate requirement for reimbursements)

-requires dues of $15 per academic year (includes Fall & Spring)

-pays dissertation/thesis binding fees for graduating members

-hosts and participates in fun and productive departmental and organizational events

-keeps you informed about upcoming conferences, symposiums, events, etc.

-helps get you on your way to conferences

-knows NMSU inside and out- we can help you with everything.

WRITERS IN THE SCHOOLS (WITS)

A Creative Writing Enrichment Program for the Las Cruces Public Schools through La Sociedad and the Creative Writing Program at New Mexico State University.

Through this program La Sociedad and the Creative Writing Program at NMSU are funded to send MFA students in Fiction and Poetry into local school classrooms for ten hours a semester to provide an enrichment program. The goal of the program is to encourage both an appreciation and application of creative writing that gives students the opportunity to discuss, interpret and express themselves through poetry and fiction writing exercises. While lessons are geared towards aspects of creative writing, MFA students may be able to develop lessons that incorporate the themes already present in the class and will be willing to work with teachers to adapt lessons which fit the needs of the class. This is an incredible program which provides valuable experiences both for the students and the writers.

This project is made possible in part by New Mexico Arts, a division of the Department of Cultural Affairs, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

LA SOCIEDAD PARA LAS ARTES READING SERIES

For over 25 years, La Sociedad para las Artes has acted as the main outreach organization for the English department. Every year, the organization hosts free evening readings of national caliber, of readers who also offer manuscript consultation to graduate students and craft talks to high school students, undergraduates, graduate students and community members. Since 1996, we have offered a Writers-in-the-Schools (WITS) program, a creative writing arts program supporting our impoverished school system, which has one of the lowest literacy scores in the country. Finally, our annual hunger benefit, part of a nation-wide movement where writers coordinate reading events to raise money to fight hunger, is in its 12th year, having raised at least $45,000 for Casa de Peregrinos, a local food bank. La Sociedad's priorities are to interface with the school system and the community, helping to tear down boundaries between "town" and "gown." As part of a major research university in one of the poorest counties in the country, La Sociedad seeks out opportunities to involve the English department locally, in order to increase public access to our university, making positive connections between all involved. These connections, benefiting the community as they do, also improve our university, since social responsiveness makes NMSU a more flexible, active organization, qualities that generate vital kinds of research.

The cornerstone of La Sociedad's activities, the Distinguished Visiting Writer Series began almost 30 years ago by now retired faculty members, Joe Somoza and Keith Wilson. Since then, with a very modest budget, La Sociedad has provided NMSU, Las Cruces and El Paso (since no series exists there) with a steady stream of the major contemporary regional, national and international writers of our day. For example, in the past ten years La Sociedad has brought Pulitzer Prize winner Richard Russo, National Book Award, National Book Critics Circle Award winner Andrea Barrett, Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky, three MacArthur "Genius Grant" Award winners-Ed Hirsh, Barrett, and David Foster Wallace-and Nobel Prize short-listed Chinese dissident poet Bei Dao. Other writers have received literature's highest honors, serving as models and inspiration for our local audience: Tim O'Brien, Ana Castillo, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, Denise Chavez, Larry Brown, Zhang Ur, Dagoberto Gilb, etc. Our readings are popular and many writers comment on the numbers we attract to their readings. Poetry readings usually have at least 100 people in attendance and fiction readings have up to 400 and sometimes more. The audience comprises a mix of students, professors and community members in equal parts and the readings are always free.

The effects of such a series are numerous. Students and non-students both learn that literature is a living thing, an active process that can be a part of a person's life. The Distinguished Visiting Writers give lectures concerning the craft and process of writing, either in the public schools or on campus, and all are welcome. The topics range from the translation of Chinese poetry, the intricacies of dialogue in short stories, to the importance of landscape to literature today. During these lectures, people read work, think about the writing process and interact informally with the writers, asking questions long after the talk is over. The series remains responsive to the interests and needs of NMSU and the community in its scheduling, collaborating with Chicano Programs, the Languages and Linguistics Department, the Asian Studies program, Alma De Arte Charter School, the Border Book Festival and locally owned presses such as Zephyr Press and Lannan Awardwinning Cinco Puntos Press.

BORDERLANDS WRITING PROJECT

The Borderlands Writing Project (BWP), formerly the New Mexico State Writing Project, is an affiliate site of the National Writing Project. The BWP serves educators in Las Cruces and El Paso, as well as across the southwestern borderlands of New Mexico. We provide teacher's opportunities to explore their own writing, investigate how they teach and assess writing, and reflect on how their students learn to write and how writing helps learning in all areas. In addition, the writing project support educators in diverse, supportive, professional communities where other dedicated teachers share their triumphs and struggles. The BWP organizes a number of events to sustain and rejuvenate participants:

- Annual Invitation Summer Institute (ISI). The ISI is a four-week, intensive workshop where participants engage in inquiry and discuss theoretical and practical approaches to teaching writing and using writing to improve learning in all subjects. The ISI is the first step to involvement in the BWP and participants receive a stipend, which may be applied to tuition costs for six graduate credits.
- Innovative Literacy, K-13: Saturday Seminar. Borderlands Writing Project, in cooperation with Dona Ana Community College and New Mexico State University proudly presents a professional development opportunity for teachers of all subjects, grades K-13.
- Annual Retreats. The BWP hosts various retreats to renew educators' dedication to teaching and their own writing.
- Participation in local and national conferences. Some participants of the 2009 Annual Summer Institute recently attended the New Mexico Council of Teacher of English Conference in Carlsbad, New Mexico, as well as the National Council of Teachers in English Conference in Philadelphia.
- Teacher Inquiry Communities. The BWP supports ongoing professional development for teachers through Inquiry Communities, providing stipends, tuition credit, and other support for participants and community leaders.
- In-Service Professional Development. The BWP offers a number of opportunities for teachers to participate in workshops on topics relevant to classroom teaching. Participation in these programs can be incorporated into an individual professional development plan.

The mission of the BWP is to create professional learning communities to support teachers at every level as they work to improve literacy and learning through writing. Following the NWP model, we provide high quality professional development opportunities to help teachers continuously improve their practice through inquiry, supportive learning communities, and personal reflection. The BWP envisions a future where every person is equipped with the writing, learning and communication, and critical thinking skills needed to participate actively and productively in our communities as well as in our digital, interconnected world.

FACULTY LECTURE SERIES

The Faculty Lecture Series was started in Spring 2013 by E.U.S.O., The English Undergraduate Student Organization. One of the most wonderful aspects of our NMSU English Department is the large body of creative and academic work that our faculty produces. The professors in our department work incredibly hard beyond the classroom to pursue their own areas of interest and research and contribute outstanding works to their respective fields. Despite this, there has been no consistent forum available for them to present their work on campus to students and fellow faculty. The lecture series was created as a means of displaying completed works and to provide a test audience and forum for discussion of new and in progress works.

In the Spring 2013 semester we had six professors present on current, completed and newly realized works. The lectures included:

Dr. Harriet Kramer Linkin

The Literary Archeologist and Rare Manuscripts: Archival Discoveries and How They Change Literary History

Dr. Jennifer Almjeld

Mediating Gender: Online Spaces, Practices, Repeat/Resist

Dr. Tracey Miller-Tomlinson

The English History Play and the Rise of the Nation

Dr. Tyson Stolte

Minds Reflected on Paper and the Art of Chemistry: Examining Victorian Literature and Science

Dr. Brian Rourke

"No Sexuality Please, We're Citizens: Pussy Riot's Profanation of Secular and Sacred Space."

Dr. Ryan Cull

Whitman, Poetry, Democracy

This is an ongoing lecture series and will have new topics presented each semester. For more information you can keep an eye on the E.U.S.O. bulletin board in the English Department, visit the E.U.S.O. website at, or contact E.U.S.O through the email address below.

CLARA BELLE WILLIAMS HALL

THE BUILDING

Clara Belle Williams Hall (formerly known as the English Building), was built in 1981. It houses English Department classrooms and offices as well as the Writing Center.

Clara Belle Williams Hall was renamed in February 2005, in honor of Clara Belle Williams, the first black student to graduate from the university.

Clara Belle Williams dedicated her life to education as a teacher, life-long student and devoted mother.

She went on to receive many honors during her lifetime and was an inspiration as she succeeded despite significant obstacles of discrimination placed before her while pursuing her higher education.

In 1961, New Mexico State University named Williams Street on the main campus in her honor. She received an Honorary Doctorate of Law degree from NMSU in 1980.

Clara Belle Williams Day was celebrated on Sunday, February 13, 2005 at NMSU. Included in the festivities was the renaming of the NMSU English Building as Clara Belle Williams Hall.

SECTION 2 PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

Graduate students in English can choose highly individualized paths of study. The varied coursework in literature, creative writing, rhetoric, and professional communication allows students to pursue particular interests with expert guidance. We pride ourselves on the sense of community shared by students and faculty. Professors meet regularly with students outside the classroom and work with students on the many extracurricular activities flourishing within the department.

Programs offered:

Masters of Arts in Literature

Master of Arts in Rhetoric and Professional Communication

Master of Arts in English Studies for Teachers

Master of Arts in Creative Writing

Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing

Doctorate in Rhetoric and Professional Communication

Information for All Programs

up-to-date list requirements for each program found online An of can be at http://english.nmsu.edu/graduate/index.html. Many program requirements are subject to advisor approval. You should consult your academic advisor as you develop your course of study and progress through it. You should also consult your advisor about how to complete the Program of Study Form, normally due after the completion of 12 credits. This and other graduate forms are online at http://prospective.nmsu.edu/graduate/forms/index.html. In addition to the specific degree requirements, students must also complete all Graduate School requirements to be eligible to graduate.

Note for new Graduate Assistants: All Graduate Assistants must take English 571. Composition Pedagogy and Practicum, during their first semester as assistants.

THE ROLE OF THE GRADUATE ADVISOR

As soon as a prospective graduate student is accepted into a program of study, he or she is assigned an academic advisor based on the student's specified area of interest and the availability of faculty. The advisor's name appears in each student's letter of acceptance from the English Department; the Graduate Secretary also keeps a list of assigned advisors. Students should contact their advisor as soon as possible to discuss specific program requirements (such as advisor-approved electives) and develop a feasible plan of study. At the initial meeting, students should receive an official and updated description of their program's requirements and a worksheet to complete as they move through the program. At a minimum, students should touch base with their advisors before registering for courses each semester.

MEETING PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS AND ASKING FOR EXCEPTIONS

Advisors should make sure that students understand the requirements that must be fulfilled for their emphasis. Students who wish to depart from normal program requirements should first seek advice from their academic advisor and gain support for the change. To depart from normal requirements, students petition the Graduate Studies Committee through the Director of Graduate Studies. Advisors do not have the authority to approve special courses of study or to waive or substitute any requirements. Note that if students satisfy a requirement, no memo to the Director of Graduate Studies is needed (as when students have had two years of study of a second language in high school with a grade average of B).

CHANGING ADVISORS

As students proceed through their course of study, they may continue to work with the initial advisor selected by the Director of Graduate Studies or they may elect to work with a new advisor whose research interests are more closely aligned with their own. Students are not obligated to continue working with the advisor initially assigned, and faculty are not obligated to direct dissertations, theses, or master essays, nor to chair examination committees for the students they advise. Customarily, the thesis director or examination committee chair assumes the role of the advisor. If or when students elect to change advisors, they need to secure the permission of the new advisor, and inform the old advisor and the Director of Graduate Studies (in writing). A copy of the memo describing the change in advisor should go into the student's file. It is important that the Director of Graduate Studies and the Graduate Secretary both know who each student's advisor is.

Master of Arts in Literature

The MA program in English with an emphasis in requires coursework and a culminating project taking the form of either a Master's essay or a Master's thesis. Students deepen their knowledge about literature, literary history, and methods of literary criticism, while also pursuing independent research in an area of particular interest. The literature faculty's own research interests are broad, including film, late medieval religious writing, Renaissance poetry and drama, British Romanticism, Gothicism, Victorianism, modern American poetry, and American ethnic literatures, and represent a wide variety of theoretical perspectives including materialist cultural theory, feminist theories, cultural studies, and queer theory. Students choose from a correspondingly broad range of courses offered by literature faculty.

Students complete 36 credit hours of advisor-approved coursework, including:

- Literary Theory and Methods (3 hours)
- Literature Courses (min. 18 hours)
- English Electives (up to 9 hours)
- Culminating Project: Master Essay (3 hours) or Master's Thesis (6 hours)
- ٠

Note on literature courses: Students must meet the following distribution requirement while completing their literature coursework. Students must take at least one course in either British literature pre-1700 or American literature pre-1900 and at least one course in either British literature after 1700 or American literature after 1900. In addition to these "early" and "late" literature requirements (6 hours), students must take at least one course in British literature and at least one course in American literature. This distribution requirement can be completed in as few as 2 courses or as many as 4.

Note on English electives: Graduate Assistants must take English 571. Composition Pedagogy and Practicum during their first semester as assistants. This course will count within the 9 hours of English electives.

Students have two options for culminating project: the non-thesis Master Essay and the Master's Thesis. Students electing the non-thesis culminating project take English 598. Master Essay (3 hours) with a faculty member. The Master Essay requires revision of a scholarly essay of 25-30 pages, the approximate length of a journal article, and reformulation of this essay to the 7-8 pages appropriate for presentation at a conference, preferably a department colloquium. Students are encouraged to undertake the Master Essay process in the first half of their third semester of full-time graduate coursework, or soon after completing 18 hours of credit work.

In addition to the primary focus on revision, the process for this project involves research of appropriate publication venues, and a final oral defense of the project as whole.

Master of Arts in Literature

In both length and in level of scholarship the long version of the paper should be modeled after articles published in specific scholarly journals in the field and the abbreviated version should reflect familiarity with conventions of conference presentation. The Master Essay, in addition to coursework, will form the basis of the oral exam.

Students electing the thesis option take English 599. Master's Thesis (6 hours) with a faculty member and complete a master's thesis on an appropriate topic, chosen in consultation with a thesis director and thesis committee. Typically theses will represent a substantial body of original research, usually between 60 and 75 pages (exclusive of Works Cited). Students are required to meet with their committees early in the writing stage to present and discuss a thesis proposal. This proposal hearing should be held early in the first half of a student's third semester of full time graduate work, or soon after completing 18 hours of course work.

All graduate students must pass an oral examination before graduating. For both non-thesis and thesis students, the examination committee consists of at least two members of the graduate English faculty and one member of the graduate faculty from outside the department. Students who wish to pursue the thesis option should form their thesis/examining committees early in their second semester of course work. Students pursuing the non-thesis option should form their should form their committees in the semester before the one in which they plan to graduate. The oral examination will focus on coursework and the Master essay or Master's thesis.

Students in this emphasis must demonstrate proficiency in a second language in one of the following ways:

- Completing two semesters of a foreign language at the undergraduate level.
- Completing two years of high school foreign language study.
- Achieving a minimum score of 62 for French, 63 for German, or 66 for Spanish on the CLEP foreign language exam (College Level Examination Program).
- Successfully completing one hour of 449 in a chosen language through the Department of Languages and Linguistics.
- Completing an upper-division literature course in a chosen language with a grade of at least a B (typically, as an undergraduate student).
- Petitioning the Graduate Studies Committee.

Students who have current multilingual skills that can be verified by credentials other than the ETS score or the course described above may petition the Graduate Studies Committee to certify their second language proficiency. Normally this petition will be submitted before the end of the student's second semester in the M.A. program. The petition, a memorandum with supporting evidence, should be submitted through the student's adviser to the Graduate Studies Committee.

Master of Arts Degree in English: Emphasis in Rhetoric and Professional Communication

The M.A. program in English with an Emphasis in Rhetoric and Professional Communication prepares students for further study at the Ph.D. level and for employment in a variety of fields including teaching, technical communication, and professional writing. Alumni work as technical communicators, editors, publication managers, web developers, and writing instructors. The emphasis allows students to take courses across the wide range of topics within rhetoric and professional communication and to choose from one of four areas of specialization: Composition, Critical/Cultural Studies, Professional and Technical Communication, or Rhetoric.

Students in the program develop individualized plans of study in consultation with an advisor. Students complete 36 credit hours of adviser-approved coursework, including:

- 12 credit hours in core courses
- 12 credit hours in courses in an area of specialization
- 3 credit hours in a methods course
- 6 credit hours in elective courses
- 3 credit hours in a capstone course

The core consists of designated courses in four areas:

- Composition
- Critical/Cultural Studies
- Professional and Technical Communication
- Rhetoric

To complete the core, students take 12 credits of core courses—two from their area of specialization and an additional two core courses from any of the other three core areas. Note: All Graduate Assistants must take English 571. Composition Pedagogy and Practicum during their first semester as assistants. The course course as a core course in Composition.

Master of Arts Degree in English: Emphasis in Rhetoric and Professional Communication

In addition to the core requirement, students take 12 credits (four additional courses) in their area of specialization, as determined in consultation with an advisor. Students are encouraged to take English 510: Proseminar in Rhetoric and Professional Communication, which counts for all areas of specialization, early in their time as a graduate student. Students also complete 6 credits of advisor-approved electives, which may include courses from related areas in English and other departments, English 597 internships, and one of the two required semesters of English 599 for students electing to complete a Thesis as part of the degree requirements (in place of a Portfolio or Master Essay).

As the capstone requirement for the degree, students either write a thesis, develop a portfolio, or revise an essay for publication. All students fulfill the capstone requirement through enrollment in English 585: Advanced Writing Workshop: RPC Capstone. Students writing a Master Essay or Master's Thesis may enroll in the following courses for an additional three credit hours in a semester prior to taking English 585: English 598. Master Essay, or English 599. Master's Thesis.

Students electing the Master's Portfolio option complete a master's portfolio, which should provide an introductory essay and representative documents to illustrate communication expertise. Guidelines for the portfolio are available from advisors.

The Master Essay requires revision of a scholarly essay of 25-30 pages, the approximate length of a journal article, and reformulation of this essay to the 7-8 pages appropriate for presentation at a conference, preferably a department colloquium. In addition to the primary focus on revision, the process for this project involves research of appropriate publication venues, and a final oral examination of the project as whole. The project's intent is to demonstrate that the student is able to engage in the process of and produce scholarly work at a level expected by the profession and consistent with the degree program. In both length and in level of scholarship the long version of the paper should be modeled after articles published in specific scholarly journals in the field and the abbreviated version should reflect familiarity with conventions of conference presentation. Further guidelines for the Master Essay are available from advisors.

Students electing the thesis option complete a Master's Thesis on an appropriate topic, chosen in consultation with a thesis director and approved by the thesis committee, which also conducts the oral examination.

All students completing degrees from the Graduate School take an oral examination in the semester they plan to graduate. The oral examination covers coursework as well as the capstone project. The examination committee consists of the capstone-project director/adviser and one other member of the graduate English faculty, together with one member of the graduate faculty from outside the department (who generally serves as the representative of the graduate school).
Master of Arts in English Studies for Teachers

The M.A. program in English with an Emphasis in English Studies for Teachers is designed primarily as a professional development tool for licensed, practicing teachers in the public schools. This program provides teachers with the opportunity to enhance content area expertise in English studies and/or obtain a basis for an additional teaching endorsement. Students take courses across a wide range of topics within English Studies including composition, rhetoric, and professional communication; creative writing; film; and literary study. Students select one of these four as an area of specialization. Students may also supplement these areas with related coursework in Communication Studies, Education, Journalism, Speech, and Theatre.

Faculty for this program are drawn from the entire Department of English. The faculty in the Department of English approach research, teaching, and other professional practices from multiple perspectives. We value collaboration and synthesis. We encourage critical engagements that challenge the borders traditionally drawn between theory and practice, production and reception, and creativity and critique. We promote situated inquiry that encourages teachers to develop a broad view of English Studies and relates that understanding to teaching in the discipline.

Students will complete at least 36 hours of graduate course work, including:

- 12 credit hours in core courses
- 18 21 credit hours in courses in an area of specialization
- 3 6 credit hours meeting an advisor-approved capstone requirement (typically the Master's Portfolio)

Students electing this emphasis develop individualized plans of study in consultation with an adviser. All students are required to take at least one course in each of the following core areas:

- Composition, Rhetoric, and Professional Communication
- Creative Writing
- Film
- Literature

Each of these courses will feature a prominent research/writing component that will provide the student with the skills necessary to extend the knowledge and competencies developed in the core courses. The products of core course research will constitute one component of the student's Master's Portfolio.

During the completion of these core courses, students select one area as their area of specialization, in which they will take six to seven additional courses. These must be chosen in consultation with an adviser. Up to two appropriate courses (six credit hours) might also be taken in related departments such as Communication Studies, Education, Journalism, and Theatre.

As part of their degree program, students develop a Master's Portfolio and defend that portfolio in an oral exam. This portfolio may provide material for the public schools' Professional Development Dossier. The Master's Portfolio should include representative documents to illustrate 1) research in the four areas of the core coursework; and 2) teaching expertise. It should begin with an introductory essay. Guidelines for the portfolio are available on the NMSU English Department website or from advisers.

All graduate students must pass an oral examination before graduating. For students in this MA emphasis, the exam covers course work as well as the portfolio. The oral examination committee should be formed by students in the semester before graduation and consists of two members of the English graduate faculty and one member of the graduate faculty outside the department. The committee administers and evaluates the oral examination.

Master of Arts in Creative Writing

The MA in English with an emphasis in Creative Writing provides students the opportunity to grow as artists within a community of writers. Students electing this emphasis choose a major genre: poetry or fiction. Among other goals, the program helps students identify strengths and weaknesses of their writing, respond to criticism and critique, experiment with different writing styles and forms, read literature as a writer and scholar, and develop a polished manuscript of their writing.

Students must complete at least 36 hours of graduate-level course work, including:

- 12 credit hours of workshop courses in the major genre (poetry, fiction).
- 3 credit hours of workshop in a second genre
- 3 credit hours of form and technique courses in the major genre
- 9 credit hours of graduate literature courses in the Department of English.
- 3 hours of English 585: Advanced Writing Workshop: RPC Capstone
- 6 hours of elective courses

Students also submit a Creative Writing Portfolio and pass an oral examination. Students entering the program prior to the fall of 2013 must also demonstrate competency in a foreign language, as described on the program website.

The Creative Writing Portfolio is a collection of your essays, stories, poetry, and other projects from you work in the program. Together with the oral exam, the portfolio is meant to demonstrate that you have strong writing skills. A portfolio also provides writing samples for use in applying for jobs or for M.F.A or Ph.D. programs. Generally, a portfolio should contain 5-8 separate writing samples and total 25-50 pages of material. It might include several distinct genres of written communication: creative work, a seminar paper, a book review, a brochure, a newspaper or newsletter article, a book design, or other documents. It might excerpt longer works to demonstrate familiarity with a certain kind of writing. It might point to online publications: a website or hypertext, for example. Students are required to take a course in portfolio design and presentation. The portfolio will be discussed and evaluated during the student's oral examination.

All graduate students must pass an oral examination before graduating. For students in this MA emphasis, the exam covers course work as well as the portfolio. The oral examination committee should be formed by students in the semester before graduation and consists of two members of the English graduate faculty and one member of the graduate faculty outside the department. The committee administers and evaluates the oral examination.

Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing

The mission of the MFA program is to emphasize the creation and critical analysis of literature, so that our students can be part of the national conversation about writing, graduating with a publishable manuscript. By providing our students with a set of skills, we prepare them to contribute to their communities as writers, publishing professionals and teachers.

Students entering the MFA program choose a major genre: poetry or fiction. Students must complete fifty-four hours of graduate-level course work, submit a creative writing thesis, give a public reading from the thesis, and pass an oral examination. Beginning in the Fall 2013, demonstration of competency in a second language is no longer required.

The required 54 credits of coursework include:

- 12 hours of workshop courses in the major genre (poetry or fiction)
- 3 hours of workshop in a second genre
- 6 hours of form and technique courses in the major genre
- 12 hours of literature courses in the Department of English
- 6 hours of English 599, required thesis work
- 6-12 hours of Master Workshop in the major genre. The Master Workshop, which will be offered once a year to MFA students, must be taken in the fifth semester of the program. Faculty and students examine the full-length book projects of each student in the Master Workshop.
- 3-12 hours of elective courses

Note: All graduate assistants must take 3 hours of English 571, Composition Pedagogy and Practicum, during their first semester as assistants.

Each MFA student submits a creative writing thesis (a collection of poems or stories, a novel) to the examining committee. The thesis will include an introductory essay in which the writer discusses her/his evolution as an artist and the evolution of the work. All MFA students must give a public reading on campus from the thesis.

All graduate students must pass an oral examination before graduating. For students in the MFA, the exam is based on the thesis and coursework. The examination committee consists of the thesis director, one other member of the graduate English faculty, and one member of the graduate faculty from outside the department.

The PhD program in Rhetoric and Professional Communication admitted its first class in 1991. Since that time, we have graduated nearly 50 doctoral students who have completed dissertation research on a wide range of subjects in writing studies. The Ph.D. program in offers courses in rhetoric, composition studies, professional communication, and critical/cultural studies. Drawing on a range of research methods and pedagogical approaches, we support students from diverse backgrounds pursuing interests in industry, government, and education, including universities, community colleges, and public schools.

The faculty in RPC program approach research, teaching, and other professional practices from multiple perspectives. We value collaboration and synthesis. We encourage critical engagements that challenge the borders traditionally drawn between theory and practice, production and reception, and creativity and critique. We promote situated inquiry that negotiates cultural, technological, disciplinary, and textual constraints in order to imagine and realize new possibilities.

Students pursuing a Ph.D. are required to complete a total of 54 semester credit hours of graduate coursework, a qualifying portfolio, comprehensive examination, internship and dissertation (post-2006 requirements).

Students in the doctoral program develop individualized plans of study in consultation with advisors. Students complete at least 54 hours of advisor-approved graduate coursework, including:

- 3 credit hours of English 610: Doctoral Proseminar in Rhetoric and Professional Communication (taken in the first semester)
- 6 credit hours in research methods (4 options)
- 12 credit hours in core courses
- 15 to 18 credit hours in courses in an area of specialization
- 18 credit hours of dissertation research

Students must successfully complete at least one designated course in each of four core areas:

- Composition
- Critical/Cultural Studies
- Professional and Technical Communication
- Rhetoric

Note: All Graduate Assistants must take English 571. Composition Pedagogy and Practicum during their first semester as assistants. The course counts as a core course in Composition.

In addition to the core requirement, students must successfully complete 15-18 credit hours in an area of specialization. Students define their specialized area, a coherent set of related courses drawn from both inside and outside the Department of English, in consultation with their doctoral committee. Possible specializations include Border Rhetorics and Cultures; Writing Program Administration/Writing Center Administration; Assessment; Pedagogy; Literacy Studies; Identity and Political and Social Rhetoric; Multimedia Rhetoric and Design; Intercultural Rhetorics; Writing Across the Curriculum; Workplace Communication; and the Rhetoric of Science.

TRANSFER COURSES

Students may apply 18 hours of master's-level work to the 54-hour coursework requirement with departmental approval. In consultation with an advisor and the Doctoral Committee, students petition for transfer credits when they are filing the Program of Study form with the Graduate School.

QAULIFYING PORTFOLIO

During the second semester of coursework, students submit a portfolio to the RPC faculty for purposes of review and evaluation. The qualifying portfolio allows students to develop a plan for their academic careers and to demonstrate that they have the requisite reading, writing, and critical skills to successfully pursue the Ph.D. Students will discuss and begin to prepare the Qualifying Portfolio in English 610. The Qualifying Portfolio consists of a file compiled during the first six months of doctoral study and submitted in the early spring. The Rhetoric and Professional Communication faculty assess the portfolio in the form of a first-year review. Students then meet with their advisors to discuss the portfolio and first-year review letter.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAM

The comprehensive examination is normally taken within the academic year following completion of doctoral coursework. The comprehensive examination tests students' knowledge in the four core coursework areas and in a specialized area. The examination covers coursework and related reading in all areas. In addition, the examination provides the student an opportunity to propose a plan for dissertation research. The examination comprises:

- Part 1: Written examination on core coursework.
- Part 2: Written examination on area of specialization.
- Part 3: Oral exam on parts 1 and 2.

The doctoral committee prepares and administers the comprehensive examination. Students unsuccessful in part or all of the comprehensive examination will be expected to retake the necessary part(s) by the end of the following semester. NOTE: Students preparing for the comprehensive examination may enroll in English 600 (Doctoral Research). English 600 is not required as part of the program, but students holding Graduate Assistantships can use English 600 hours to maintain full-time status while preparing for the exam. More extensive guidelines for the Comprehensive Examination can be obtained from your adviser.

INTERNSHIP

Students will earn a minimum of 6 credits (English 597) for an internship. Students develop an internship plan in consultation with their advisors. The internship should complement the program of study and career objectives. Students with professional experience equivalent to an internship may petition the RPC faculty for a waiver of the internship requirement. If the waiver request is approved, students will complete six additional hours of coursework.

THE DISSERTATION

The dissertation process includes five components:

- Doctoral Committee
- Dissertation proposal and proposal hearing
- 18 hours of dissertation credit hours
- Dissertation
- Dissertation defense (examination)

Early in the second year of the program (after passing the qualifying portfolio), students should choose an advisor and begin exploring possible dissertation topics. Students constitute a Doctoral Committee of faculty members inside and outside the department of English. This committee is normally composed of three members of the graduate faculty from the Department of English and one member of the graduate faculty from another department. Each committee must include at least four Graduate Faculty members.

The Committee's responsibilities include approving the course of study, administering and evaluating the comprehensive examination, and serving as the committee for the dissertation and its defense. After passing the comprehensive examination, the students begin full-time work on the dissertation. Early in the dissertation process students develop a formal dissertation proposal comprising a definition of the problem to be explored, a literature review, a methodological or theoretical section, and a working bibliography. With the chair's approval, the proposal is submitted to all members of the doctoral committee for their consent. During this period, students enroll in English 700 (Doctoral Dissertation); a minimum of 18 credits of English 700 is required for the student to graduate. Students who achieve ABD (all but dissertation) status must register for a minimum of 3 credits of 700 each semester until they complete the dissertation and pass the final oral examination; the dissertation must be completed and approved within 5 years after the comprehensive examination. Additional guidelines for planning and completing the dissertation can be obtained from your adviser.

After the dissertation is completed, students defend the dissertation in a final oral examination.

Program Outcomes for Graduate Students

Note: Each year the faculty assess graduating students on a series of desired outcomes. We include this information here to give you sense of some of the skills you will acquire in your program.

EXPECTATIONS FOR CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAMS

Faculty expect that upon completion of his or her program a student should be able to demonstrate the ability to engage with and contribute to relevant scholarly/creative conversations. The student should show significant growth as a writer as evidenced in the student's thesis manuscript. Specific problems from a student's early work should be addressed in ways that show the ability and willingness to revise.

The student should show growth as a knowledgeable reader in the field as evidenced in the ability to discuss his or her work and respond to questions. Growth should be shown from a candidate's early ability to discuss literature as a writer, and to discuss aspects of craft. A candidate should also show growth from his or her early presence in the classroom, in the ability to talk about the work of others, and in the ability to talk about his or her own work.

EXPECTATIONS FOR MA PROGRAM IN LITERATURE

Faculty expect that upon completion of the program the student should show the ability to read and interpret primary texts in a critical manner and use critical, literary, and/or rhetorical theories. Students should demonstrate knowledge of relevant literary movements, periods, authors, and texts. Each candidate should be able to locate, evaluate, and integrate scholarly research materials, develop and articulate written arguments using the conventions of his or her field. The candidate should be able to clearly speak about his or her work and demonstrate an ability to engage with and contribute to relevant scholarly/creative conversations, as appropriate to the final project.

Faculty Expectations for Graduate Students

EXPECTATIONS FOR MA IN RHETORIC AND PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATION & MA IN ENGLISH STUDIES FOR TEACHERS

Faculty expect that upon completion of his or her program the student should be able to situate work in the ongoing scholarly conversations of the discipline and show a familiarity with current scholarly thinking and professional literature. The student should demonstrate the ability to construct and convey academic arguments effectively and convey complex information to both non-technical and disciplinary significance, and frame additional research that is to be completed. The student should be able to draw relevant conclusions, speculate on disciplinary significance, and frame additional research that is to be completed. The student should demonstrate the facility to write in all areas, from macro- and micro-organization of arguments through paragraph-and sentence-level concerns to the conventions of standard academic English. Along with the previous expectations, a student should be able to present work visually with attention to principle of effective design and usability, as well as be able to produce work that engages with and contributes to relevant scholarly/creative conversations, as appropriate to the final project.

EXPECTATIONS FOR PHD IN RHETORIC AND PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATION

Faculty expect that upon completion of his or her program the student should be able to demonstrate the ability to define a significant research question situated in the ongoing scholarly conversations of the discipline and show a familiarity with current scholarly thinking and professional literature related to the research question. The student should have the ability to develop and appropriate methodology to investigate the research question or scholarly issue and be able to frame, refine, and investigate a hypothesis, scholarly claim or proposition. The candidate should have the ability to draw relevant conclusions, speculate on disciplinary significance, and frame additional research to be completed related to the research question, and show facility in writing in all areas, from macro-and micro-organization of arguments through paragraph-and sentence-level concerns to the conventions of standard academic English. Along with the previous expectations, a student should be able to present work visually with attention to principle of effective design and usability, as well as be able to produce work that engages with and contributes to relevant scholarly/creative conversations, as appropriate to the final project.

SECTION 3 FOR ALL GRADUATE STUDENTS

This section contains some very basic information that all graduate students should be aware of.

AS A GRADUATE STUDENT

ORIENTATIONS

Each year our Director of Graduate Studies holds a 1-2 hour English Graduate Coursework Orientation for all Graduate students. Separate from our departmental requirements, you will be required to attend an orientation through the Graduate School.

MAILBOXES

All Graduate Students are given mailboxes. These mailboxes can be found in the copy room of the English Department Office. If you have any correspondence whether internal or external correspondence, it will be put in your mailbox.

CONFERENCE FUNDING

Some conference funding might be available to you through ASNMSU and the Graduate Student Council. You can contact their offices for more information.

NMSU ONLINE

New Mexico State University utilizes a number of online systems. The main two are MyNMSU, and Canvas. Through myNMSU, students, faculty, and staff can access registration, grades, Banner Self Service email, time and leave reporting, online learning, phonebook, and much more. Canvas is a learning management tool that professors and students use to turn in online assignments, manage grades, hold online discussions, evaluate courses, etc.

Help with the MyNMSU system can be obtained through the site itself, my.nmsu.edu, or through the ICT Help Desk. Training workshops for canvas can be found at http://learning.nmsu.edu/canvas/canvas-workshops/

ACADEMIC STANDARDS AND POLICIES

Be aware that NMSU maintains certain policies and procedures of which students should be aware. These Polices can be found in the NMSU policy manual at: http://nmsu.edu/manual/current-nmsu-policies.html

SECTION 4 GRADUATE ASSISTANTSHIPS

Your position as a teaching or research assistant will present opportunities for growth and development as well as numerous challenges. This section will provide you with the pertinent information related to your responsibilities, as well as resources for you as an instructor.

GA ORIENTATIONS

First, please know that we are delighted you are joining us as both a graduate student and an instructor. As you know, there is a competitive process for both categories.

Your first responsibility as a Graduate Student and a Graduate Assistant will be to take part in a week-long orientation in the English Department before the school year begins. The week-long orientation is an intensive teaching practicum designed to introducer you to the philosophy and pedagogy that guides our Writing Programs in general and the first course you will teach (ENGL 111G) in particular. For most of you, this orientation will be followed by a graduate seminar (ENGL 571: Rhetoric and Writing Pedagogy) in the fall semester that carries three graduate credit hours.

Separate from our departmental requirements, you will be required to attend an orientation through the Graduate School. Each year our Director of Graduate Studies holds a 1-2 hour English Graduate Coursework Orientation for all Graduate students.

TEACHING ASSISTANT

A graduate teaching assistant is a graduate student appointed part-time by the assistant's department. The graduate teaching assistant's primary responsibility is in an instructional capacity. Graduate teaching assistants may lecture, lead discussion groups, serve as an assistant to laboratory classes, tutor students, proctor examinations, grade tests and papers, evaluate textbooks for adoption, and provide general assistance in the instructional process under the direct supervision of a faculty member. Graduate students with relevant prior teaching experience may be allowed to be the primary instructor.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT

A graduate research assistant is a student appointed part time by the assistant's department. The graduate research assistant's primary responsibilities are research related. Graduate research assistants may assist faculty members in research and creative activities, perform administrative or editorial duties directly connected to research and creative activities, develop and evaluate instructional material and/or curricula, or assume responsibilities for a designated research area under the direct supervision of a faculty member.

Note:* A full-time graduate assistant may be assigned a maximum total workload of 20 hours per week during the academic year. Graduate assistants, fellow and trainees may accept supplemental employment with approval of the department head and the Dean or Associate Dean of the Graduate School. Such supplemental employment is limited to 5 hours per week. International Students are not allowed to work more than 20 hours per week.

All graduate assistants follow general policies and procedures, regardless of their appointment. A Graduate Assistant (which consists of Teaching Assistants, and Research Assistants) is first and foremost a graduate student.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

All Graduate Assistants must enroll for at least nine credit hours per semester. An assistantship requires that you work twenty hours per week, typically teaching one course and performing additional duties of four to six hours per week, such as working in the Writing Center. For the first year, Graduate Assistants will pay tuition automatically at the in-state rate. After your first year, regardless of your assistantship status, it will be your responsibility to establish New Mexico residency for tuition purposes.

FULL-TIME EQUIVALENT (FTE) EXPLANATION

Full-time assistantships (0.50 FTE) require students to perform assistantship assignments for 20 hours per week during the period of the assignment. Half-time assistantships (0.25 FTE) require students to work 10 hours per week during the period of the assignment.

General Information

ELIGIBILITY

Graduate Assistantships are awarded each spring semester during the regular spring admissions process. Assistantships are typically awarded to incoming students. The process for applying for a GA is particularly competitive. Continuing graduate students are invited to apply for a graduate assistantship by the spring application deadline. However, if you are not awarded an assistantship in the English Department please note that many continuing students find fulfilling GA's or adjunct training in other departments or at local community colleges.

PAYMENT

Graduate Assistants are paid on a bi-weekly basis. The pay dates are the 15th and last day of each month. If the pay date falls on a weekend or holiday, pay will be given on the preceding day. Graduate Assistants can pick up their checks in the English Department Office, Room 132. You also have the option of setting up direct deposit through your myNMSU account. For any questions regarding your checks you may contact:

Marilyn Crawford (575) 646-1369

Human Resources (575) 646-8000

CONFERENCE FUNDING

Funding up to $200 for Conferences is available to Graduate Assistants through the English Department. To receive this funding you must fill out a Travel Request Form in the Department office. This form along with documentation of the conference that you will be attending must be turned in prior to leaving for the conference. After it is approved by the Department Head you will be able to receive your funding.

Note: Additional funding may be available to all students through ASNMSU & The Graduate Student Council. For more information, you can visit their websites or contact their offices.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Additional information on maintenance of Academic & Employment Standing, policies and procedures, or general information as a graduate student, you can refer to the following:

- Graduate Assistant Handbook http://gradschool.nmsu.edu/ga/Graduate%20Assistant%20Handbook%202012.pdf
- Graduate School Website http://gradschool.nmsu.edu

Note: The Graduate School Website is particularly helpful as it contains guidelines and forms you will need. It also contains video workshops, information about deadlines, thesis and dissertation guidelines, graduate orientations and much more.

RESOURCES

LIBRARY

As an instructor of undergraduate students, you hold a responsibility for introducing them to library resources. The Zuhl Library Reference Desk, (575) 646- 5792 is a good starting point.

- Electronic Journals. A number of electronic journals are available through the NMSU library. These can be found at http://lib.nmsu.edu by selecting the Electronic Journals link.
- Workshops. The Library offers a variety of workshops throughout the year. For a complete listing of workshops, dates and times visit: http://lib.nmsu.edu/Instruction/workshops.

TEACHING ACADEMY

The Teaching Academy provides a variety of workshops on teaching. The workshops are available to both graduate students and faculty. The Teaching Academy can be reached at (575) 646-2204.

MATH SUCCESS CENTER

Provides tutoring for students enrolled in select undergraduate courses.

Campus Dining

(575) 646-4212/www.dining.nmsu.edu

Auxiliary Services is dedicated to providing quality food choices at NMSU for students, faculty, and staff who may not always have the time or ability to leave campus for breakfast, lunch, or dinner. Our options not only include Southwest favorites and international cuisines, but we also strive to mix locally-owned restaurants with the best national brands to make students feel comfortable no matter where they may have traveled from. In addition to our many fine restaurants and food vendors, NMSU also provides three convenience stores (Corbett Corner adjacent to Corbett Center Student Union, Aggie Express at Vista Del Monte, and The Marketplace inside the Barnes & Noble at NMSU Bookstore & Café) and several Coca-Cola and Mesilla Valley Snacks vending machines for those needing a quick pick-me-up between classes.

NMSU COUNSELING CENTER

(575) 646-2731/ http://www.nmsu.edu/~counsel/cc/index.html Garcia Annex, Room 100

The NMSU Counseling Center has a range of counselors and psychologist that are here to assist NMSU students with career and personal counseling. Counseling services offered include individual, group, and couples. These services are free to NMSU main campus students and confidential.

The Counseling Center seeks to assist all students in developing to their fullest potential academically, socially, emotionally, and interpersonally. The Counseling Center recognizes that a student's academic success is dependent upon their emotional well-being, their belief in themselves, and their ability to successfully interact with the interpersonal world that surrounds them. We assist students by providing them with opportunities for self-exploration and growth, by offering needed support in times of crisis, and by providing career information and guidance.

The Counseling Center also has helpful information for you as instructors. As New Mexico State University faculty, you may at some time encounter a student in distress. Your role as helper is not only valuable, but crucial. Often you will be able to respond effectively to the student's needs; however, there will be occasions when you will want tot refer the student to a professional for assistance. This information is designed to help you recognize the signs of distress and provide you with the basic knowledge and skills necessary to intervene effectively.

The Counseling Center also runs a Relaxation Room. The Relaxation Room, located in Branson Library, Room 127, is a free service provided to all students at NMSU. Students may use the services for a session of up to 60 minutes per day.

Hours of Operation: 3-7pm Monday through Thursday.

CAMPUS HEALTH CENTER

(575) 646-1512/ http://wellness.nmsu.edu/chc

Walk-ins: 7:30 am-11:30 am 1:00pm-4:30 pm Monday through Friday

The Campus Health Center is a nationally accredited outpatient ambulatory health care center offering services in acute medical care, mental health, women's health, immunizations, and health education. Services are available to students, faculty, staff, dependents and retirees on the NMSU health plan.

The main entrance is located on the North East corner of the building (corner of McFie and Breland, across the street from the Zuhl Libarary).

There is no charge for a routine office visit for students who have paid the NMSU Health Fee. The Health Fee is included in tuition for full-time main campus students. Part-time or community college students may choose to purchase the health fee to gain access. An office visit fee applies to all students not classified as full-time, those who have not paid the health fee, dependent spouses, and transitional students. There are fees for laboratory tests, x-ray procedures or treatments. Prescriptions can be filled at the Campus Health Center Pharmacy (fees do apply), or at a pharmacy of your choice.

The Campus Health Center offers Student Injury and Sickness Insurance Plans for Graduate Assistants. More information can be found on the Campus Health Center website or through Human Resources.

HISTORIC MESILLA

Mesilla is a small town by today's standards but 150 years ago it was the major stop for those traveling between San Antonio and San Diego. Mesilla hasn't changed much over the years, allowing visitors to see what an 1800's border town looked like. Western Legend Billy the Kid once stood trial for murder in a Mesilla courtroom, and the Mesilla Plaza was once a major stop for the Butterfield Stagecoach. Originally, Mesilla was part of Mexico, but with the signing of the Gadsden Purchase in 1854, the village became part of the United States. Mesilla is anchored by the Basilica of San Albino. The church, originally built of adobe in 1855, still offers masses today, both in English and Spanish. Outside the church is a memorial to parishioners who died in combat. Today, Mesilla offers a wide range of events as well as shopping and dining on the town's plaza. Enjoy a meal at the famous Double Eagle or La Posta restaurants, where patrons can enjoy real local cuisine while they visit one of the most historical locations in New Mexico. Mesilla is located south of Las Cruces on Avenida de Mesilla. (www.lascruces-new-mexico.org)

LAS CRUCES AND LOCAL ATTRACTIONS OUTDOOR RECREATION
